Name and position of editor-in-chief	Vitaly Zyusko
Information about the publisher	Most books for teenagers published by KompasGuide encourage them to ask adults for answers. We firmly believe that children have the right to know about things that are important to them. They must feel free to ask about anything they are interested in. It is vital for children to understand what this world is really like and to be sure that their family is not hiding anything from them.

That is why KompasGuide has published books dealing with death, World War II, the mass prosecutions of 1937, diseases, divorces, and the joys and troubles of complicated school life.

It is important for us that parents consider KompasGuide editions to be not just books to give their children to read but a link between the world of children and the world of adults, an invitation to dialogue. No matter whether this dialogue is easy or hard, it is essential for both sides. This is what we strive for.

Information about the publisher	The Pushkin State Museum of Fine Arts, one of the largest museums of world art in Russia, releases 20–30 publications every year, including collection catalogues (catalogues-raisonné), guides to the permanent collection, scholarly publications (conference proceedings, collections of articles, research materials), exhibition catalogues, and books for children. Most of the Museum's publications are large-format illustrated albums. The average print run is 1,000 copies, so many titles have become bibliographic rarities that are highly valued by art lovers. A special area of the Museum's publishing program are books that introduce children to art, as well as publications dedicated to the aesthetic education of the younger generation. One of the most popular series is “Learning to Look” that tells about the main forms of art. Pupils of the children’s art studio of the Center of Aesthetic Education at the Museum made the illustrations for the new book series “I Read – I Draw”. The Pushkin Museum’s publications have been nominated for the Book of the Year and Image of the Book awards.
